Key Factors in the Development Environment for Youth Football Talent in Malaysia

Journal (reviewer, ESCI Q2)

· Title: Key Factors in the Development Environment of Football Talents in Chinese Schools

Research interests

In future research, I plan to focus on the field of sports sociology in football, concentrating on the development and identification of football talents. The development of football talents is influenced by multiple factors, including physical fitness, technical skills, psychological traits, and social support systems. By analyzing the growth factors of players at different developmental stages, I aim to further reveal the key elements that affect the development of football talents. Regarding talent identification, I will develop a data-driven talent identification model to identify potential players in a more scientific and efficient manner. Through the analysis of multi-dimensional data such as physical fitness, technical skills, and psychological traits, I will reduce subjective biases and enhance the fairness of identification, providing more accurate basis for talent cultivation in Chinese football.
